BP CEO Tony Hayward (VIDEO): 'I'd Like My Life Back'

www.huffingtonpost.com

Think Progress caught the latest insensitive comment made by BP CEO Tony Hayward on Sunday regarding the Gulf oil spill. After apologizing for the disaster, Hayward manages to bring it back to himself:

Sandra Simonds II Is it useful to think of the oil spill as a “natural” disaster insofar as the same forces/ structures from which it emerges are causing other “natural” disasters such as global warming? (which would naturally mean that there is nothing not “natural” about a “natural” disaster. What is that that is not nature?

Jonathan Skinner "we've still got to make some tough decisions about opening new offshore areas for oil and gas development in ways that protect communities and protect coastlines. . . . we're announcing the expansion of offshore oil and gas exploration, but in ways that balance the need to harness domestic energy resources and the need to protect America's natural resources." --President Barack Obama, March 31, 2010

The Deepwater Horizon disaster caused headlines around the world, yet the people who live in the Niger delta have had to live with environmental catastrophes for decades

Roxanne Amico Really happy about the scent of the rain soaked earth today. I really like that. Did I mention how happy it makes me? It thrills me to no end. PS I love the smell of rain-soaked soil. Really, I do.

BP CEO caught on tape ordering media to get away from oil-coated beach | Raw Story

rawstory.com

Walking along a Louisiana beach yesterday, the chief operating officer of British Petroleum was caught on tape ordering subordinates multiple times to "get 'em out of here," apparently referencing media personnel who were swarming the scene prior to a press conference.
